Michael is skilled statutory and strategic planner, with an eye for detail and implementation.

Michael recently completed his Bachelor of Urban and Regional Planning with Honours at RMIT University.

He is a skilled statutory and strategic planner who has experience working with a range of public and private sector clients on large projects.

Michael's keen eye for detail and knowledge of planning process allows him to provide timely and succinct advice to clients. He is a skilled writer who has a knack for absorbing large quantities of information and synthesising it down to its most important elements in an accessible, readable format.

It's with these written and communication skills that Michael develops strong relationships with clients, Council and authorities, allowing him to get the best out of each project he works on.
